

Vail fugitive found in Wyoming

Evan Gibbard

Send us your news

Friday, December 15, 2006

Email

Print

 Recommend 0

ENLARGE

Alejandro Bolona
Special to the Daily

Millbern said. The man then notified police.

The same tipster was reportedly walking down a street later and saw Bolona, Millbern said. The tipster again called the police, who responded and arrested Bolona, Millbern said.

Bolona is also suspected of similar crimes elsewhere in Eagle County and in Aspen, Millbern said. Authorities in those areas are expected to add charges of their own now that Bolona is in custody.

News Editor Evan Gibbard can be reached at 748-2922 or egibbard@vaildaily.com.

About 200 wanted posters and some citizen assistance aided in the arrest of a man wanted by Vail authorities Friday afternoon, police said.

Alejandro Bolona, 36, was working as a housekeeper at a Vail hotel when he illegally entered one or more guest rooms and took checks, according to Vail Police Detective Ryan Millbern. Bolona was later caught on tape cashing checks at a bank in Glenwood Springs, after which he never returned to his job in Vail, Millbern said.

Vail Police later learned that Bolona was attempting to obtain employment at a hotel in Jackson Hole, Wyo., Millbern said, at which point Vail Police issued a warrant for his arrest on felony charges of theft and burglary.

Millbern said he printed a number of wanted posters featuring a photo and personal information on Bolona and sent them to hotels and motels in the Jackson Hole area.

“A gentleman saw the picture and realized that (Bolona) was a bunkmate at a local homeless shelter” in Jackson Hole,